

ANNUAL EXECUTIVE LUNCHEON

Featuring Patrick M. Byrne of Overstock.com

Monday May 9, 2005 · 12:00pm–1:30pm

Hyatt Regency Bethesda

Register now for this luncheon, which is sure to be another sell-out! Since launching Overstock.com in 1999, Byrne (graduate of Walt Whitman High School) and his Utah-based company have garnered national attention from numerous media outlets, including The Wall Street Journal, ABC News with Peter Jennings, Fortune, CBS Marketwatch, and Business Week, among others, and is a frequent guest on Bloomberg TV, CNBC, and Fox shows. Named to Business Week's list of the 25 most influential people in e-Business in 2002 (the magazine cited survival strength and vision as qualities that qualified Byrne for the list), Byrne was the Ernst & Young 2003 "Entrepreneur of the Year" awardee in the category of Lifetime Achievement.

In addition to having a black belt in tae kwon do and having once pursued a career in professional boxing, Byrne has ridden a bicycle across the country four times – his last ride, in the summer of 2000, was to raise awareness and money for cancer research at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute. Dedicated to helping the disadvantaged on a global scale, Byrne in 2001 founded Worldstock.com, Overstock.com's socially responsible goods department, selling handcrafted products created by artisans from developing countries (and from underprivileged artisans in the U.S.) at extremely low prices: the artisans who create these products are paid an average of 70% of the price charged by Overstock.com.
